RegenceRx is dedicated to provide the tools you need to understand your options and be a more informed consumer. This preferred medication list/formulary will help—with the answers you need to access affordable prescription benefits.

Determining Cost

How much you pay for a prescription depends on whether it's a:

- Generic
- Preferred/formulary brand name
- Non-preferred/non-formulary brand name (brand name medication not on the list)

Your cost is lowest for generic medications and highest for non-preferred/non-formulary brand name medications. You can find specific coverage and copay information in your summary of benefits.

Generic medications

Generics provide the same therapeutic benefits of their brand name counterparts, without the brand name price. In fact, generic medications are generally 20-60% less expensive. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration assures both generic and brand name medications meet the same high standards for strength, quality, and purity.

Newly-introduced generic medications

When a generic is introduced to the marketplace, it immediately becomes available at the lowest copay. After a generic is available, the brand name medication will only be available at the non-preferred/non-formulary copay.

Preferred/formulary brand name medications

Brand name medications on the preferred medication list (PML) have been chosen because our professional review has shown each of them to be high-quality, effective, and affordable. Preferred/formulary brand name medications are either more effective or equally effective—at a lower cost—than other brand name medications not listed.

Non-preferred/non-formulary brand name medications

Non-preferred/non-formulary brand name medications are those that do not appear on the PML due to side effects, therapeutic performance, or higher cost. You may still opt for these medications, but your copay will be higher than any other prescription type.

How can I use the PML/formulary to get the best benefit?

Ask your doctor to prescribe generic medications whenever possible. If a generic is not available, ask your doctor to choose a preferred/formulary brand name medication. Take this list when you go to the doctor so you can discuss your options.

How can I tell if a listed medication is a generic?

Generic medications are listed in lower case bold, like this: fluconazole.

How can I tell if a listed medication is a brand?

Brand name medications start with a capital letter and are followed by a registered trademark symbol like this: ®.

Brand name medications listed in parentheses after a generic are:

- non-preferred/non-formulary
- only listed as a reference for a generically available medication

Please remember that not all brands are preferred/formulary.

What if my medication is not on the PML/formulary?

First, check with your doctor. There are preferred/formulary alternatives in most cases, and your doctor can determine an acceptable alternative for your medical condition. If you remain on a non-preferred/non-formulary brand name medication, your benefit will depend on your coverage.

What if my medication needs prior authorization?

Certain medications may need prior authorization. This means that we will need to review information from your doctor before the medication can be approved for coverage. For a list of medications that need prior authorization, please visit our Web site at www.regencerx.com or contact our Customer Service Department at the phone number listed on your member card.

If you decide to purchase the medication without authorization, you will be responsible for the total cost of the prescription.

What resources were used to determine what medications would be on the PML/formulary?

Information from the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA), medical literature (including scientific studies), and national treatment guidelines were reviewed by the RegenceRx Pharmacy and Therapeutics (P&T) Committee. This committee includes practicing doctors and pharmacists. When there are choices, medications with the best value were included on the PML/formulary.

If you have questions, please contact our Customer Service Department at the phone number listed on your member card. Or visit us at www.regencerx.com.

Preferred/Formulary Medications: By Category

Effective February 1, 2008

This list can be used to assist you and your doctor in choosing a generic or preferred/formulary medication.

- Generic medications are listed in lower case bold. Example: fluconazole.
- Brand name medications start with a capital letter and are followed by a registered trademark symbol like this ®. Example: Ancobon®.
- Brand name medications listed in parenthesis after a generic are:
 - Non-preferred/non-formulary.
 - Only listed as a reference for a generically available medication. Example: fluconazole (Diflucan®)

Additional Information:

- Preferred/formulary medications are limited to the dosage form and strength listed; if no strength is listed, all strengths for the listed dosage form are preferred/formulary.
- Sustained action/release (SA/SR), extended release (ER/XR), long-acting (LA), and enteric coated (EC) medications are only preferred/formulary if listed.
- Occasionally, preferred/formulary medications may be contract exclusions and, therefore, are not covered.
- Some medications may require prior authorization or have quantity limits.

Please note that the PML/formulary list may change. To view the most current list, visit our Web site at www.regencrx.com. For more detailed prescription benefit information, please refer to your benefits booklet.

A to Z Listing: Generics

Effective February 1, 2008

This list can be used to assist you and your doctor in choosing a generic.

- Generic medications are listed in lower case bold.
- Non-preferred/non-formulary brands are listed only as a reference for generically available medications.
- Not all generics are listed. Those listed are examples of some of the generic medications available.

Additional Information:

- Occasionally, generic medications may be contract exclusions and, therefore, are not covered.
- Some medications may require prior authorization or have quantity limits.

Please note that the PML/formulary list may change. To view the most current list, visit our Web site at www.regencrx.com. For more detailed prescription benefit information, please refer to your benefits booklet.

Non-Preferred/Non-Formulary Brands: Generic and Preferred Brand Alternatives Effective February 1, 2008

This list can be used to assist you and your doctor in choosing a generic or preferred/formulary alternative.

- Generic medications are listed in lower case bold. Example: fluconazole.
- Non-preferred/non-formulary brands are listed in parenthesis only as a reference for generically available medications.
- This is a partial list. New or rarely used medications may not be listed.
- Other, less-expensive options may be available over the counter (OTC) without a prescription.
OTC products generally are not a covered prescription benefit.

Additional Information:

- Preferred/formulary medications are limited to the dosage form and strength listed; if no strength is listed, all strengths for the listed dosage form are preferred/formulary.
- Sustained action/release (SA/SR), extended release (ER/XR), long-acting (LA), and enteric coated (EC) medications are only preferred/formulary if listed.
- Occasionally, preferred/formulary medications may be contract exclusions and, therefore, are not covered.
- Some medications may require prior authorization or have quantity limits.

Please note that the PML/formulary list may change. To view the most current list, visit our Web site at www.regencrx.com. For more detailed prescription benefit information, please refer to your benefits booklet.
