“I wouldn’t be able to be here without the scholarships and grants I received … Financial Aid does everything they can to help throughout the process. They make it easy for me to stay here and continue with my education.”

— Delaney Morse ’17

Immersive learning environments at Pacific University create unique opportunities for our students to learn and grow. From renovated laboratory spaces to interactive technology in our classrooms, your generosity allows a new generation of Boxers to pursue their passions through hands-on experiences.

Senior Delaney Morse ’17 is excited about childhood education and making a positive impression on the lives of children. For her thesis, she is collaborating with the Pacific University Early Learning Community to focus on the role of technology in emergent literacy. Her study concentrates on how technology can reinforce classroom lessons, a tool that is sure to play a role in her soon-to-be career as an elementary school teacher.

Taylor Hiraki ’17 is in her final semester of undergraduate study, diligently working towards Pacific’s School of Physician Assistant Studies graduate program. The focus of her thesis is on the role of reactive chemicals in the process of aging and their effects on lifespan. Taylor’s research is challenging the ideology that these reactive chemicals have a strictly deleterious effect on lifespan.

Each senior thesis, while different, shares the spirit and passion found in our Pacific students. Gifts to the Pacific Excellence Fund allow students like Delaney and Taylor to attend this special university. You create opportunities for them to think, care and create, while participating in internships and special collaborations that shape them into leaders who are ready to make a difference in their fields and beyond.

Make your gift to the Pacific Excellence Fund today and help our students thrive.

Sincerely,

Karine Kadyan
